

The power of having a retained recruitment partner

Does your firm need support with finding and recruiting talented accounting professionals?

Explore this case study to learn how we can help to connect you with skilled candidates - from Semi Senior up to Equity Partner.

"Through retained relationships with firms up and down the country, we're filling roles with the highest calibre candidates.

Not only does a retained recruitment partner give you a team of experts on-hand to support your recruitment needs, it also increases the probability of recruiting into a role.

The profession is experiencing a challenging hiring landscape, but we're here to help as your retained recruitment partner.

Garry Howling,
Managing Director

From being engaged as the client's retained recruitment partner to the candidate's first day of employment in just 22 days, this case study showcases the power of a retained relationship.

Working with the client, a leading independent accountancy practice in the West Midlands that was looking for a talented Tax Manager, the team here at Public Practice Recruitment Ltd got to work to find the right candidate for the role. Here's the breakdown:

Day 1: Retained role engaged & candidate search launched

Day 20: Candidate interviewed & job offer made

Day 22: Candidate's first day of employment

Day 16: Candidate presented to the client & interview offered

Day 21: Employment contract created & signed by the candidate

BENEFITS OF A RETAINED RECRUITMENT PARTNER

Increased probability

Working with a retained recruitment partner increases the probability of finding a standout candidate and successfully recruiting into a role.

Speed to market

Amidst a highly competitive recruitment landscape, working in a timely manner provides a distinct advantage over other firms.

Expert knowledge

As specialists in recruitment for accountancy firms across the UK, we know a thing or two about attracting the right talent for any role.

Public Practice
RECRUITMENT LTD